

going out with a .410...let me ask Senator Avery a question because he probably knows more about guns than I do. Senator Avery, if you're not going to chop the barrel of a .410, is there a handgun with that designation, .410?

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Avery.

SENATOR AVERY: Yeah, I believe there is.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, can you describe it for me because I heard somebody back there tell you, yes. So whoever that was, would you or whoever...oh, Senator Pedersen was leading you down the primrose path. Let me ask Senator Pedersen a question then.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Pedersen.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Pedersen, have you dealt with firearms, pistols and shotguns and rifles?

SENATOR PEDERSEN: Yes, I have.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, there is a pistol designated a .410?

SENATOR PEDERSEN: I don't know of a pistol a .410, but I do now there is a shotgun .410.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thanks. Senator Avery, can I talk to you again, please? Thank you. Senator Avery, the question I had asked you was, are you aware of a pistol with a designation .410 and then isn't that the question I asked when Senator Pedersen said yes?

SENATOR AVERY: I believe there is. I don't exactly know what they class as the caliber of it.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Avery, let me see just how much you know about guns. Is there a .12 gauge pistol?

SENATOR AVERY: Not that I know of.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Have you seen a .410 pistol?

SENATOR AVERY: No, I haven't, personally.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you believe there is a .410 pistol?
